E. ADAMO

“Lamp from Hurse”, 2022, epoxy resin, glue, trim detailing, battery-operated light, 13 x 11.5 x 6 in.

@2millionyearsago

E. Adamo is an artist, writer, and worker. Their work is a study of general public membership, its invocations of distance and belonging, and the fantasies that emerge from those experiences. This lamp is a relic of a recent performance of theirs, Hurse, in which it sat atop a classic white Cadillac parked in a funeral home parking lot. During the performance visitors were invited to enter the vehicle and share a drink with it's "chauffeur".

COOPER CAMPBELL

“Covenant”, 2022, Silver (Approx. 1940s)

@coopercampbell

An heirloom, or an object passed down through family ties, can be seen as an asset tasked as a social enforcement tool. The heirloom is a capital investment made insoluble by the personal and emotional investment of the owner/family in the object's social life and provenance. This insolubility allows the capital investment to maintain itself intergenerationally, therefore allowing for a familial continuum of wealth. Wealth transmitted along hereditary lines maintains the social contract of the family via the underlying implication that the delivery of the promised gift (heirloom) is predicated on the recipient's adherence to the social standards set by the family.

Liquidation of the heirloom via sale is a breach of the social contract, only performed when there is a lack of recipients, recipients have been disinherited, or the owner or recipient is under hardship. The work is a service for six with serving utensils in the pattern English Gadroon designed and manufactured by the American firm Gorham Manufacturing Company (est. 1831). The work was originally purchased in Long Beach, CA in the late forties and has now been purchased by the artist directly from an estate and consigned to Alyssa Davis Gallery. The opening bid will be set at the market value for the material of the work, (1,112g of sterling silver).

Cooper Campbell (b.1994, Multnomah County, OR) is an artist and worker living in Queens, NY.

MARTINA COX

"Viola Hart's sweet little bottom feeder", 2022, assortment of glass beads, wire, 19th century bustle, rock, 11 x 9 x 10 in.

@martinacox_

*Viola Hart's sweet little bottom feeder is made from a 19th Century bustle owned by the actress Viola Hart. A bustle is a padded undergarment coined as such and popularized in the second half of the 19th century, and was used to support and hold up the many layers of heavy skirts required of women's dress at the time. The bustle also created a pronounced hump shape at the woman's rear that protruded to horizontal extremes by the 1880s. 1. Eicher, Joanne Bubolz, ed. Encyclopedia of World Dress and Fashion. New York: Oxford University Press, 2010. <http://www.worldcat.org/oclc/767923552>

Martina Cox (b. 1995) graduated from The Cooper Union in 2018 and is the owner and designer of the bespoke garment label Martina Cox. Her work focuses on the craft and histories of garment making as well as the performative role that clothing takes on in relation to the body. She has exhibited at Jack Chiles (New York, NY), Lvl3 Gallery (Chicago, Illinois), ROMEO (New York, NY), and she has given talks at Larrie Gallery (2019) and Precog Mag online (2020). She has been interviewed for SLEEK, Garage, Coeval, Precog Mag, and LVL3 Online. Martina currently lives and works out of Brooklyn.

ALICE GONG XIAOWEN

"flour, water", 2021, cast pewter, soapstone, 3 x 7 x 10 in.

@alice_gong_xiaowen

Text by Robert Morris Levine For Alice Gong Xiaowen, translation is both method and subject. The ephemeral becomes solid. Light becomes heft. The lowly hallowed. Memory becomes matter. The familiar becomes alien and the domestic industrial. Bodies become texts. She casts dough, pinched with the seams of the dumpling wrappers her grandmother taught her to make, into steel, itself made from pig iron through a process of chemical translation—literalizing the ingots they symbolize. And she does so in the American mills where men once manufactured steel for the railroads before the production was offshored to China—two nations she is from but neither to which she belongs. The resulting figures emerge like entrails freshly excised—the kind that used to be steamed and read—their pinches now sutures straining to hold the impossible together. They say: Much is lost in translation. Other things are gained. And yet others are, like Gong Xiaowen, caught in between—neither this nor that, here nor there, us nor them. Alice Gong Xiaowen, (Canadian b.1994, Beijing, China) is an artist and curator based in New York. Her thoughts linger on the conceptual connotations of matter, once translated and interpreted as material culture. She writes occasionally and hosts Room482, an exhibition space dedicated to fostering community convening around art in the Bed-Stuy neighborhood of Brooklyn. Alice Gong Xiaowen has a Bachelor of Fine Arts from the School of the Art Institute of Chicago.

SHANA HOEHN curated by PETRA BIBEAU

"Paper Doll #3", 2021, hood ornament and bronze, 6 x 9 x 6 in.

@shanahoehn

Shana Hoehn is an artist currently based in Los Angeles, CA. She transforms wood and metals through traditional and digital fabrication methods. Her research and artwork are a personal and historical inquiry into the aesthetics that allegorize the femme form. Conjuring imagery from her girlhood psyche and the female body in car culture, the medical imagination, pop-culture, and military-industrial objects, she disorganizes these sites of control and fantasy in such a way that retires their previous symbolic performance. Hoehn received her BFA in Painting at Maryland Institute College of Art and her MFA in Sculpture and Extended Media at Virginia Commonwealth University. She was a Fulbright Fellow in Installation Art in Mexico where she conducted research on customs surrounding home altars. Hoehn has participated in residencies and fellowships such as the AIR Program at Artpace San Antonio, the Jan Van Eyck Academie, the Core Program at the Museum of Fine Arts Houston, Skowhegan School of Painting and Sculpture, Lighthouse Works, Acre Residency, and SOMA Summer. She has upcoming solo exhibitions this year at Make Room, Los Angeles, and Prairie, Chicago.

"Backbend", 2022, epoxy clay, paint, 6 x 6 x 14 in.

@kianmckeown

McKeown's practice of contemporary surrealism divorces objects from their function while using biomorphic elements to reflect different emotive states.. Nervousness or uncertainty are often evoked through the use of misplaced and seemingly random symbolic forms. All of these sentiments act to characterize the figures of McKeown's sculptures and drawings as struggling to exist and assimilate into the real world around them. Kian McKeown (b 1999, New York) received a BFA from Cooper Union, where he has enjoyed both exhibitions and publications. He lives and works in New York City.

Dean Millien has been sculpting aluminum foil for over 4 decades. His sculptures depict animals, cartoon characters, and things from his imagination. The scale of Millien's foil sculptures range from life sized to miniature. Millien made his first sculptures as a child because he didn't have toys to play with. His work has been displayed at The Outsider Art Fair, LAND Gallery, and Summertime Gallery. His work is in the private collections of Ralph Lauren, David Byrne, and other notable figures. Millien was recently covered by The New York Times in an article 'Bringing Outsider Artists In.'

LOUIS OSMOSIS

"Zipped Bread Device #1", 2020, sliced bread, shellac, hot glue, epoxy, zippers, acrylic vitrine, plywood, screws, polyurethane, 12 x 6 x 6 in.

@louisosmosis

Louis Osmosis is an interdisciplinary artist working primarily in sculpture, drawing, and performance. His practice revolves heavily around craft, performative actions, and readymades, incorporating found objects and vernacular materials, from popsicle sticks to toilet paper tubes, and hornet nests to wood altered by beavers. Equally invested in postmodern bleakness and artistic production, Osmosis's speculative approach to form reflects his ongoing investigation into modes of aspiration and lack. He received his BFA from the Cooper Union in 2018.

JUSTIN SUAZO

“Orchid Shadow 2”, 2014, CNC Aluminum, 13 x 15.5 x .375 in.

@justin_suazo

Justin Suazo, b.1992, Chinese-Dominican American, Based in New York City, Cooper Union School of Art, 2014. Justin Suazo is a multidisciplinary artist living and working in New York. His work spans across drawing, sculpture, photography, video, and printmaking. Using his interest in the physical realm to realize that of the virtual, imaginary, psychological, historical and digital spaces, Suazo attempts to bridge his personal history and past as the son of Dominican and Chinese immigrant parents with tropes of corporate American present and future loosely tied together through the lens of a science fiction as a way to ask what it means to be American? In this work “Orchid Shadow 2” a .375” aluminum panel has been engraved by a CNC router with a drawing originally made by tracing the shadows of a living orchid. The orchid is a reoccurring theme in Suazo’s work as it relates to his Dominican grandmother’s favorite flower as well as a ubiquitous trope of a sterile office environment. By collapsing of these two ideas into one another Suazo bridges the fertile rich organic memory of his past into a cold, sleek, machine-made, representative durable token of the present. An attempt to understand and represent the direction culture is taking steaming from immigrants from rich cultural histories being streamlined into the new frontier of American culture.

“Do it for GG...”, 2022, mix media assemblage, 17 x 10 x 6 in.

@american_voodoo

Diego is a NYC based artist born in Chile raised around the world. His works seek to explore the oneiric depths where character is created and identity is forged. Spells are cast and embedded into the works, transmuting the negative energies into colorful Majik. This work is a captured action and a direct rejection of Fascist Black Shirts/Black American Flag on the rise in our nation and many others around the world today. In the name of the unknown soldier lost over the top at the Somme we challenge the identity of the Kingdom of Fear that seeks to enslave “We the people...”.

ALEXANDER PERRELLI

"Infinite Terminus I", 2022, steel studs, aluminum, low insulation tape, aluminum foil tape, copper flashing, infrared transmitting (IRT) plexiglass, hex head screws, cotton string dyed with iron rust, 10 x 10 x 8 in.

Infinite Terminus I is one work in a series that concerns itself with the nature of apertures and my fascination with their phenomenological and existential potential. With this piece, I have constructed a camera obscura that does not function as it normally would. Peering through the aperture into the body, the reflected image is that of the edge of the aperture and the eye of the observer. The blackness surrounding the eye brings to mind the ever-expanding void of space, and the froth of forces within it that elude our sight.

Alexander Perrelli was born in 1984 in San Francisco, CA. In 2007, he received a BFA in Photography from the School of Visual Arts, NY. In 2017 he received an MFA in Studio Art from CUNY Hunter, NY. His work moves freely among photography, sculpture, painting and sound. He currently lives and works in Brooklyn, NY.
